The primary focus of the orientation programs in First Year Experience (FYE) is to provide transition services for incoming freshmen, transfer students, and their parents and guests. This is accomplished through Camp War Eagle (CWE), our orientation program for incoming freshmen and their families, and Successfully Orienting Students (SOS), the orientation program for incoming transfer students and their families. Orientation programs are coordinated by four professional staff members, two graduate assistants, one administrative support staff member and a large undergraduate student staff (approximately 100). FYE also houses First Year Seminars and Learning Communities.

Camp War Eagle (CWE) provides freshman students with a spirit-filled introduction to academic and social life at Auburn University. A staff of 61 Counselors assists the freshmen and families throughout the two-day, one-night program. Six returning students serve as Head Counselors and work throughout the academic year to plan the program and train and supervise the new Counselors.

Successfully Orienting Students (SOS) is a transfer student specific orientation program for new students and their parents and guests. SOS is a one-day program with sessions held throughout the academic year. We select and train approximately 30 Orientation Leaders to ease the transfer process by welcoming transfer students to the Auburn Family and introducing them to the University’s services and resources. Four returning students serve as Coordinators and work throughout the academic year to plan the program and train and supervise the new Orientation Leaders.
